About Sara

Sara Fleming is a freelance writer, blogger, and aspiring author. Married to the love of her life for 12 years, she is the mother of two beautiful boys who have special and medical needs. Sara was a public-school teacher, now homeschool teacher, who completed her Masters in Christian Education and Discipleship at Asbury Theological Seminary. She began a ministry for special needs mothers called Special Kids, Special Moms after her oldest son was diagnosed with autism. Her articles have been published by Her View From Home and Kingdom Winds; she has also led various Bible studies over the years and has been involved in youth and children's ministry both in the states and on the mission field.

Aside from writing and speaking to a larger audience, Sara has a deep passion to encourage individual women in their faith, motherhood, and daily life. She loves to talk about Jesus and share stories of redemption from her own walk with Him and from the lives of others. She believes in radical kindness, compassion, healing, and hope. She also enjoys the beach, good books, raspberry chocolate mochas, and clean floors!

Sara surrendered to the Holy Spirit and became a devoted follower of Christ during her college years. Her plan was to be a full-time foreign missionary after having spent time in other countries. While she still dreams of the day she can return to Central America, she now realizes that God's most important plan for her life is to love and serve her family through thick and thin. Sara's desire is to bring glory to God; her life and her family's journey is a testimony to the faithfulness of the One who hath done great things.You can find her on the blog Pacis in the Gutter.